"No man can determine what are o be the details of working out the roblem facing the country. The first hing to do is to determine the facts." The president said when the facts are known "we must soberly adjust our affairs to them. Now, for the first time, it isn't a question of ad-justment only to our own domestic affairs, but affairs of the world. It's not a party question. That's why we all got together and provided for a turiff commission, I haven't appointed can put them immediately up to the senate for confirmation.' President Wilson said "if a man is nonest he can see facts and appreciate them whether democratic or republican. "Our policy regarding tariff cannot be confidently determined until we know more than we do now, including our relationships to the rest of the world after the war."

Regarding use of foreign relation ships to secure political advantage, he said: "I want here to register streauous protest against this practice. I would be ashamed to call myself a partisan if, in the midst of a political campaign, there were those about me, who would play with the loss of life of American citizens even to make of American political capital."

He discussed business relationships

"Most Comfortable Room in the House This Chilly Weather"

Is Mary Sunshine's comment on her model Gas Kitchen, equipped with a Gas Kitchen Heater for keeping the room warm during the chilly days of fall and winter.

With a Gas Kitchen Heater Mary finds it unnecessary to sacrifice the convenience of gas cooking for troublesome coal stove cooking.

"A Gas Kitchen Heater is inexpensive," says Mary. "It burns coal, coke, wood and rubbish and has a gas kindling arrangement which enables me to start a coal fire without wood.'
